Astor Services for Children & Families has appointed Todd Karlin as chief program officer.

Karlin will have oversight of all agency programs. An employee of Astor since September 2002, Karlin previously served as assistant executive director of clinical services, where he oversaw the agencies' clinical programming in the Bronx and the Hudson Valley.

Karlin co-chairs the New York City School-Based Mental Health Committee, which seeks to overcome systemic hurdles to providing integrated mental health services in New York City school settings. He has clinical and administrative experience in day treatment programs, community schools, outpatient clinics, foster care, residential and hospital settings.

Karlin received his master's degree and doctorate from Pace University in school-clinical child psychology.
